Signal System Planned For P.A. Chime Tower

by Hank Lewis

Installation of a campus chime and signal system in the chime tower on the roof of the Practical Arts building may be completed by Christmas time, Pres. F. J. Prout announced this week. $30,000 of the $5,500,000 appropriated to Bowling Green by the Ohio Legislature will be spent for this signal system.

Although the appropriation for the chimes is $30,000, the initial cost and the cost of installation will run over that amount according to Dr. Prout. The Alumni association will supplement the state appropriation with enough money to complete the installation of the chimes and to place in the main corridor of the Practical Arts building a bronze plaque on which will be recorded the names and classes of the University students who were war casualties.

Alumni Association Gives Aid

The Alumni association plans to make the chimes a memorial honoring University World War I and II veterans and particularly the 54 Bowling Green men who lost their lives in World War II.

The chimes will be electrically controlled and may be both automatically and manually operated. Records will be used for the automatic signalling of class changes. The manual part will be used by members of the music department for chime music on special occasions.

Chimes Will Supplant Clocks

It was noted that the chimes will save a great expense in revising the worn out signal system now carried on by the electric clocks throughout the school. Dr. Prout said the chimes will be a particularly efficient type of clock system because the buildings of the school are now scattered throughout the far areas of the campus. The chimes will also eliminate the need of conduits.

Credit Given For Building Set

John Nagy, technical supervisor of the play, "George Washington Slept Here," is requesting help in building the set for the university showing. As an added inducement he is offering one hour credit in Speech 106 for freshmen and sophomores, and credit in Speech 306 for juniors and seniors, for every 50 hours work put in at the workshop.

Anyone interested is requested to see John Nagy at the workshop in the rear of the Ad building auditorium.

containing the necessary electric wiring in order to connect distant buildings with a clock system.

The control room for the chimes will be in the northwest corner of the corridor on the first floor of the PA building.

The Practical Arts building, constructed in 1929 from money appropriated by the state legislature, contained the necessary provisions for the construction of a chime tower on the roof of the building but eliminated the item for the purchase of chimes. Consequently, the chime tower, designed to carry the weight of the chime installation, was never provided with chimes since no state legislature until this time ever appropriated the necessary funds.

Governor Thomas Herbert has yet to sign the appropriation bill of which the chime item is a part. He is expected to do so by June 30.

Chorus Members Schedule Concert

The summer chorus of 113 members, under the direction of Dr. James Paul Kennedy, began practice June 23. Practices are scheduled for Monday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 8:30 in the Practical Arts auditorium. Culminating these practice sessions, the chorus will give a concert at the University August 1.

At present the chorus is comprised of 44 sopranos, 37 altos, 14 tenors, and 18 basses. Dr. Kennedy would like a still larger group and will continue to hold tryouts for anyone interested.

Also directed this summer by Dr. Kennedy is the A Cappella choir. Practice sessions are being held in preparation for a November concert tour. The trip, as now scheduled, will carry the group as far west as Denver, Colo.

Choral arrangements include some Fred Waring selections: "Down the Wind," "Sky Anchors," "The Nursery Rhyme Suite," and "Country Style." Other numbers are "America," "The Angelus," "The Holiday Song," and "Donkey Serenade."

touchdown for the vet?

by Dick Price

Whether we play political football or really try to make the vets happy seems to be the point of controversy for the Ohio veterans bonus bill which was passed by the Legislature last month. It could have been handled, as in other states, so the vets could and would receive some vacation money. But instead, here in Ohio, the ball of decision has been kicked around, and now is in the laps of the austere voters to be accepted or rejected next November.

Rejected? Some will question this, and yet there are those who are patiently waiting to put their "X" in front of the NO ballot.

Who composes these elements? The first is the rural population which has more representatives in the Ohio congress than do the cities and communities. Among this rural population exists a host of exempt draftees who remained at home to till the soil and reap high profits. Their natural instinct will be to vote against the measure both for reasons of envy and to avoid more taxes. They, too, exercise their vote on whether the men who did go into service will receive any benefits or not. The farmers subsidies, alone could pay the bonus.

It was with mild surprise that a number of veterans went to Columbus to protest any assistance. They said they represented most Ohio veterans. They didn't consult everyone. Right here on campus in the past year there have been several red, white, and blue boys who, though vets, are against any aid. That could be understood where self initiative was concerned but these R, W, and B boys were condescending enough to accept free education.

Others are opposed to such action, vets included, fearing that they will pay for their own bonus in taxes.

As for the writer, as long as the U.S. continues sending money and materials to Russia and to the smaller nations which are flocking to communism, then he will have no compunctions intruding to get the few dollars he can from his forgetful Uncle Sam.

No Coal Dust On BG Hero

When I went home for my four day summer vacation my father called all the neighbors in to see me. They're hard working, God fearing people who work in the mines, but they never miss an opportunity to listen to an educated man.

I stood in the middle of the floor with our friends seated around me.

"Say something intelligent for the people," my father ordered.

"That's my son," my mother whispered to the woman next to her, "no coal dust on him."

Brain-Racking Job

My father waited. The neighbors waited. I racked my brain for an old formula, a Spanish exclamation, a psychology definition.

"See that letter on the sweater," my father said waving his hand, "football. No coal dust on that lad."

(I would have to break it to father that it was for taking care of the equipment.)

"Is everyone getting enough to eat and drink," shouted father standing on a chair.

Say Something Intelligent

"Yes," shouted the neighbors.

My father turned to me, "Say something intelligent for our good friends."

I cleared my voice. The neighbors leaned forward in their chairs, their freshly scrubbed faces intense.

"I think I'll go for a walk," I said.

"That's my son," my mother said.

Janssen Tells Story Of Trumpet History

by Jack Miller

The initial assembly program of the summer term, held June 23 in the main auditorium, Curt Janssen and Constance Claire presented a lecture-concert called the "Romance of the Trumpet."

Opening the program with a medley arrangement of the "Commodore" by Herbert Clark, Mr. Janssen accompanied by his wife, Constance Claire, gave his first rendition on a modern trumpet. Following this, Mr. Janssen went into the history and development of the trumpet from its earliest date to the present time. Stating that the first trumpets were megaphones hewn out of wood.

Grave Tender Wins U. S. Trip

For years Mr. and Mrs. George A. Moore of Indianapolis, put money in the bank to send their only son to college.

The college fund went unspent as their son, Pfc. George R. Moore, 19, a graduate of Indianapolis Tech high school, lay in a field of white crosses in Margraten cemetery in Holland.

Arrived on Memorial Day

Today, however, the money is being spent. It went for a trans-Atlantic plane trip and a six-month vacation in the United States for a young Dutch girl who "adopted" the grave of the Indianapolis boy.

The girl, 20-year-old Coorie Koort of Heerlerheide, Holland, arrived in New York City as radio stations in the United States were broadcasting the "Crosses in the Wind" dramatization of Margraten cemetery.

Mrs. Moore met her there. They spent a week in the big city seeing the sights. It was the first time the Dutch girl had been away more than a day from her home.

Decorated Grave

Dressed in a red, white and blue dirndl skirt she made for her trip, the little Hollander arrived in Indianapolis. She seemed embarrassed as the Moores told of her faithful care of their son's grave and of her weekly letters and pictures.

Thanks for Kindness

"Such a big reward for so little," was the way she described her visit. We felt it was such a little thing we could give because those American boys gave us so much."

In Indianapolis she was introduced to a great American institution, the ice cream soda. She approved of it.

Children Are Named From Calendar, Hope

Pearly Gates, First of September, and his brother, First of August are proper names listed in the Industrial Relations Department in Alabama.

Others were Square Bell, General Davis, and President Dickenson. In Pennsylvania a truck driver is named Main Line Harris.

Displays Collection

He displayed his collection of antique horns made from wood bamboo, bone rubber, and conch shells. Conch shells, he explained, were now put to more practical use in China where they are used as fog-horns. Also in his collection were two trumpets of Chinese origin known as the "Lapa" and "D Ka Ku" both of which are still played at funerals and celebrations.

12' Trumpet

Alternately discussing and performing on the trumpets, Mr. Janssen also exhibited a Tibetan trumpet approximately twelve feet in length and played a tune on the "shofar," the oldest horn in use today. This trumpet was originally used by the Hebrews in Biblical times. Next on the program was Constance Claire's rendition of Liszt's "Etude in D Flat."

Discusses Types

In closing, he went briefly over the rest of his large collection, discussing in turn the various types of trumpets which had developed including in these the fanfare, slide, clarion, French bugle, rotary valve, echo, and base trumpets. Besides the Tibetan and Chinese trumpets, his collection included horns of various types from Japan, Germany, Italy, Ethiopia, Brazil, and Denmark.

Vets Shun Advantages Of Public Laws 16, 346

Slightly less than half of the World War II veterans have taken advantage of the education or job-training benefits offered by the government.

Of Ohio's 770,000 World War II veterans, 325,686 have been approved for training benefits and only 150,953 have actually commenced training.

IM's Feature Golf, Tennis, Soft Ball

The comparatively new game of high pitch softball will make its debut on the Bowling Green campus next week when an intramural league in the sport gets underway. The game is being inaugurated in an effort to allow more students to take part in the intramural program. Besides employing ten men instead of the conventional nine, the game requires more substitutes than the regular game due to the free hitting feature.

In addition to the softball league, a tournament in golf and tennis being planned by George Muellich, intramural director for the summer. Plans for the latter two sports are not completed as yet and are dependent upon the interest shown by the students. All those students interested in these tournaments are requested to sign up with Muellich immediately.

The softball league is scheduled to get underway on Monday, June 26, however, a meeting for all managers expecting to enter teams is set for tomorrow night, at 7. At this time the rosters of all teams entering the league must be turned in.

Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday night of each week have been set aside for the league with all postponed games to be played on Thursday nights.

VA Operates Own Canteens

The Veterans' Administration is operating its own canteen service in each of the nine veterans' hospitals in Ohio, Michigan, and Kentucky. This program was authorized last August by Congress who appropriated $4,000,000 to finance the project.

The canteens are operated along the lines of the army PX's and navy ship stores. Veteran patients may purchase at reasonable prices tobacco products, toilet articles, miscellaneous food items, and the services provided by barber, beauty, and tailor shops.

Profits, which are at a minimum are turned over to the United States Treasury.

Redskins Sign Ex-Falcon Star

Last week, George Preston Marshal, owner of the Washington Redskins, announced the signing of George Brodston, former star Falcon end and fullback of the 1943 season.

Before coming to Bee Gee in the Navy's V-12 program, Brodston was a standout end at Creighton University. At Bowling Green, with a wealth of good end material available, he was switched to the fullback slot where his accurate place kicking and devastating line bucking first brought him to the attention of National League Scouts.

Signed by Washington as an end, his rangy 6'2" height and pass catching ability will make him a natural target for Sling-shot Sammy Baugh's passes.

While at this University, Brodston, in addition to playing football, held the record for several Navy Physical Education Tests.

In the semester report just released by the bureau, statistics show that 323 interviews were arranged and 221 positions filled satisfactorily. Of the 240 students who were on file in the bureau office 192 were placed in positions, some in as many as fifteen temporary jobs.

Household jobs, maintenance, and baby sitting are the tasks which have used most of the students. Other categories listed in the report are store clerks, laborers, office workers, specialized workers, restaurant help, and yard workers. Of the placements, 123 have been for jobs on the campus and 98 have filled off-campus requests.
